Повышение устойчивости транспортной системы к внешним воздействиям и ее экологической устойчивости

Hall 1, Level +1

четверг, май 28, 2015, 15:00 - 16:30

Уязвимость транспортных систем в случае экстремальных погодных, политических и экономических событий становится все более очевидной. Так, например, потенциальный рост издержек от сбоев в сети в результате вызванных изменениями климата ураганов требует мер с точки зрения как снижения выбросов парниковых газов, так и адаптации. На этапе планирования необходимо учитывать потребность в защите инфраструктуры от климатических изменений. Это может вести к увеличению расходов, что, в свою очередь, будет отвлекать ресурсы, изначально предназначенные для расширения инфраструктуры.

Многие системы снабжения не отличаются устойчивостью и быстро нарушаются в случае экстремальных природных, политических или экономических событий. Множество взаимосвязанных тенденций в хозяйственной деятельности привели к повышению хрупкости систем снабжения в период значительного расширения диапазона и серьезности угроз, в том числе со стороны терроризма и пиратства. Существует политический инструментарий, способный помочь компаниям и правительствам разработать стратегии в отношении рисков и устойчивости к внешним воздействиям. В центре этих моделей лежит важнейший компромисс между эффективностью и избыточностью. Высокие издержки систем снабжения в результате катастроф в последнее десятилетие указывают на то, что данный компромисс нуждается в переоценке в пользу снижения риска и повышения устойчивости к внешним воздействиям.

На этом заседании разработчики политики и лидеры отрасли обсудят стратегически важные вопросы и роль государства и частного сектора в отношении:

- стратегий, направленных на повышение устойчивости к внешним воздействиям и усиление надежности сетей;
- мер реагирования на крупные сбои;
- достижения сокращений в выбросах углерода на транспорте;
- взаимодействия и совместного планирования специальных мер для повышения устойчивости к внешним воздействиям.
